THE HAWAIIAN BANANA KING.

Mr. and Mrs. P. L. Stevens of Denver, and Mrs. L. G. Kellogg of Honolulu, are registered for an extended stay at the Hotel Redondo. Mr. Stevens is a leading mining and stockman of Colorado, and Mr. Kellogg is known as the Hawaiian Banana King, the banana trade of the islands being under his control.—Los Angeles Times.

It looks as if people had been unjust to John L. Sullivan all these years.

He says he never smoked a cigarette.
—Somerville Journal.

Color photography is never going to appeal very strongly to the man who has a red nose.—Washington Post.

SUDDEN DEATH OF MRS. STEPHEN DESHA

(By Wireless Telegraph.)

HILO, February 1.—The wife of Rev. Stephen Desha died suddenly of heart failure at two o'clock this morning.

Mrs. Stephen L. Desha was the wife of the well-known pastor of the Hail church. She was about thirty years of age and was married to Rev. Mr.
Desha less than a year ago. She has been suffering for some time with heart trouble. At the time the Kinau left Hilo she was thought to be much better and was believed to be on the road to recovery.

She was Mrs. Star Kapu when Rev.
Desha married her. She leaves a sister, now in Hilo, and a brother, Kaopu, living in Honolulu, and also a niece in Honolulu, Mrs. Otto Winkler.

DID BRAKEMAN COMMIT A CAPITAL CRIME?

LAHAINA, February 1.—Tanasaka fell between two cars on Thursday afternoon about two miles from Lahaina, and the poor fellow was so mangled that he died immediately.
Thursday evening someone reported that the brakeman had shoved him off the car. The native boy has been arrested and a few Japanese stopped work on Friday morning to see that the boy be brought to justice, as they think he is guilty. The inquest began Thursday afternoon, just as the mail is being made up.

DELUGE FOR WILD WEST SHOW.

(By Wireless Telegraph.)

HILO, February 1.—Heavy rains are prevailing and will probably prevent the opening of the Wild West Show.
